

Coaching in the Workplace

Course Duration – 2 Days

Course Cost – $800 pp

CLF level Alignment

MMDF Alignment

Prerequisite

Prior to attending the first day of training, participants will be asked to complete a 15-minute survey about their coaching experiences, as a coach and, or when being coached. The survey will also include, action oriented, coaching questions such as ‘what are the three most important outcomes you want from participating in this training?’ This pre-workshop survey will unfold into learning the first principle of being an excellent workplace coach.

Overview

In this two-day workshop you will learn the essential principles, strategies and tools to be an effective, and in fact, excellent workplace coach. You will gain the knowledge through workshop participation and experiential learning that will enable you to confidently bring out the best in others and in doing so, you will also learn how to bring out the best in yourself.

Workplace coaching is not management skills re-packaged and neither is it therapy or counselling, although coaching does use some of the same foundational communication processes. Coaching is about resourcefulness, performance and action. It is also about having ‘a coach in your corner who champions you’.

Who should attend this course?

This workshop is for anyone wanting to learn the process of building a strong team by equipping people with the tools, knowledge, and opportunities they need to fully develop themselves to be effective and action oriented in their commitment to themselves, their work and their team.
