Introduction

The Northern Territory Public Sector (NTPS) is the largest employer in the Northern Territory with around 23,000 staff, with 4% recently identifying as having disability\(^1\).

The EmployAbility Strategy 2018-2022 identifies key initiatives to increase workforce participation of people with disability across the NTPS. Focusing on people with disability will open up a diverse talent pool of potential employees as well as ensuring that people who acquire a disability during their employment are appropriately supported in their employment to maximise their potential and continue to contribute to the important work we do.

Disability in the community

- Nationally, people with disability represent 18.3% of the population.
- Some 3.7 million Australians with disability, had a specific limitation or restriction such as a schooling or employment restriction (e.g. unable to attend or required special equipment) and/or limitation with core activities such as communication, mobility or self-care.
- Nationally, 25.1% of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people have a disability.

The Northern Territory

- In the NT, People with disability represent 11.3% of the population, which is significantly lower than the national average (18.3%). This is possibly related to the younger demographic of the NT.

Participation of people with disability in the workforce is important for social inclusion and economic independence. Having disability can impact on a person’s ability and opportunities to participate in the workforce. The following 2015 Survey of Disability, Ageing and Carers (SDAC) results are for the working age population (aged 15 to 64 years), living in households in the Northern Territory.

GRAPH 1: Although there is a relatively small percentage of people in the NT under 60 with disability, the ageing workforce demographic within the NTPS will increase the prevalence of employee disability experienced within agencies over time as the workforce ages. This will result in agencies needing to support existing employees who acquire disability as they age.

Employment participation: people with disability and no disability in the NT and across Australia.⁴

GRAPH 2: Indicates that the percentage of people with disability participating in employment in the NT (67.1%) is higher than the national participation rate (53.4%). However, so too is the general population participation rate (88.3%) in the NT, compared with the national participation rate (83.2%). In addition, the gap between employment participation of Territorians, with and without disability is less than that at the national level.

National policy context

National Disability Strategy 2010-2020

In 2009, the Council of Australian Governments (COAG) developed and endorsed a 10 year National Disability Strategy designed to inform and focus policy development at all levels of government and to provide national leadership toward greater inclusion of people with disability. Prior to the establishment of the national strategy, the Northern Territory Government had already implemented a disability employment strategy in 2003. This first NTPS disability strategy was reviewed and revised in 2006, 2009, 2012 and 2017.

National Disability Insurance Scheme (NDIS)

The National Disability Insurance Scheme is a significant national social reform to improve the conditions and opportunities for people with disability. The NDIS intersects with employment services for individuals with disability and also provides some support to enable workforce participation for people with disability. The NDIS is being rolled out in the Northern Territory throughout 2017/18.

Why we need this strategy

In 2017, the Office of the Commissioner of Public Employment (OCPE) launched the NTPS Inclusion and Diversity Initiative to bring together initiatives and strategies focused on Inclusion and Diversity and position at the forefront the need for agencies to focus on, and engage with inclusive practice in the business of the NTPS. The initiative currently includes the following focus areas:
As the largest employer in the Northern Territory, the NTPS has a critical role in the employment of people with disability. The employment of people with disability is a key component of creating a diverse and inclusive NTPS.

The majority of people with disability can and do want to work and contribute to society. Work is essential to an individual’s economic security and is important in promoting social inclusion. Employment contributes to physical and mental health, personal wellbeing and a sense of identity. Work is the pathway used by most Australians to long-term economic security and wellbeing. Recognising their ability and increasing employment opportunities for people with disability is important for a robust and representative NTPS.

According to the Willing to Work report⁵, recruitment and retention of people with disability requires:

- Leadership commitment
- Ensuring non-discriminatory recruitment and retention practice
- Building workplace flexibility
- Targeted education and training in the workplace in relation to rights and responsibilities at work, internal grievance processes, flexible leave options, any employee driven networks and the nature and impact of discrimination
- Building healthy workplaces.

This strategy incorporates these recommendations as well as drawing on lessons learned from the past, and building on previous work to promote the NTPS as an employer of choice for Territorians.

Evaluation of the current strategy

During 2016 an independent consultant was commissioned to undertake an evaluation of the current strategy (EmployAbility Strategy 2013-17). During the focus groups, success factors, challenges and opportunities were identified as well as activities to guide the development of this strategy. This information was used to shape and inform this strategy.

What we need to achieve with this strategy

The Northern Territory EmployAbility Strategy 2018-2022 and the EmployAbility Action Plan reflect the Northern Territory Government’s commitment to remove systemic and attitudinal barriers so that people with disability have a better opportunity to access and retain employment in the NTPS.

A Northern Territory Public Sector with systemic and attitudinal mechanisms that enable and support participation by people with disability to ensure a workforce reflective of the community it serves

1. Increased meaningful employment participation by people with disability in the NTPS through inclusive recruitment, employment and retention practices
2. Removal of unintended barriers that limit the participation of people with disability in the NTPS

We will meet these goals through achieving the following outcomes:

Inclusive practice
- Outcome 1 The NTPS has an inclusive culture
- Outcome 2 The NTPS proactively develops and engages in diversity initiatives
- Outcome 3 Inclusion and diversity principles are embedded in all aspects of NTPS business

NTPS reputation
- Outcome 4 The NTPS is known as an inclusive employer
- Outcome 5 The NTPS is an employer of choice for people with disability

NTPS workforce
- Outcome 6 Increased representation of people with disability in the NTPS
- Outcome 7 The NTPS workforce is disability confident
- Outcome 8 People with disability are represented and supported in positions at all levels in the NTPS
Social Model of Disability

This strategy is built on the social model of disability, which is the internationally recognised paradigm endorsed in the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CRPD). The social model sees disability as the result of interaction between people living with disability and an environment with physical, social, attitudinal and communication barriers that impact an individual's interaction with the environment, including the workplace.

Disability
Includes problems in body functions or structures - generally relates to physical disability but also the unseen disability that impact an individual’s functioning including mental and intellectual disability.

Activity Limitations
Difficulty in executing activities - these are limitations that occur as a result of disability.

Participation barriers
Difficulties an individual may experience in life situations and the ability to undertake the normal functions and social activities of life as a result of the barriers that exist in society including social, physical, attitudinal, policy and communication barriers.

DIAGRAM 4:
The relationship between disability, activity limitation and participation barriers

A disability can lead to participation barriers or activity limitations that are then impacted by participation barriers in the workplace including:

- Social barriers – group attitudes, workplace culture, exclusion
- Physical barriers – accessibility, inadequate workplace personalisation
- Attitudinal barriers – includes limitations that others perceive about the person with disability, stereotyping, stigma, prejudice and discrimination
- Practice and policy barriers – includes failure to provide reasonable workplace personalisation, policies that do not provide equitable access and participation for employees with disability
- Communication barriers – inaccessible information including technology deficiency, interpretation, technical jargon that is inaccessible to individuals with cognitive impairment.

Therefore, the overall focus of this strategy is the removal of unintended barriers that limit the participation of people with disability in the NTPS.

Guiding principles

This strategy is built on the foundations of the NTPS core values of commitment to service, ethical practice, respect, accountability, impartiality and diversity. The principles of employment for people with disability in the NTPS are the same as those for people without disability. The main focus is ensuring all people who work in the NTPS have an equal opportunity to fulfil their career potential.

This strategy is underpinned by the following assumptions:

1. People with disability are individuals who have the inherent right to respect for their human worth and the right to be treated fairly and with dignity.
2. People with disability have the same rights as other members of Australian society to realise their individual capacities for physical, social, emotional and intellectual development.
3. People with disability have the same right as all Australians to pursue meaningful employment and a chosen career where their skills and talents can be developed and their aspirations realised.

Definitions

Definition of Disability

The NTPS has adopted the World Health Organisation’s definition of disability as follows:

A person with disability has long-term physical, mental, intellectual, or sensory impairment/s which, in interaction with various barriers, may hinder their full and effective participation in society on an equal basis with others.

Disability may be present from birth, acquired due to illness or accident, or come about progressively as we age.

Definition of accessibility and dignified access

The Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (DDA)\(^9\) sets minimum standards for access to buildings, corporate systems and facilities. An accessible workplace means that an employee with disability has access to everything any other employee can reasonably access in their position.

Dignified access moves beyond compliance with the DDA and ensures that people with disability are able to access and participate fully in the NTPS. It means that our buildings, amenities, systems and workplace culture, empower and enable people with disability to fully contribute to the work we do in the NTPS.

Information sharing

Information sharing in the context of disability is any information shared by an individual in relation to their disability and associated issues. It is also referred to as ‘disclosure’.

Workplace Personalisation

Workplace personalisation is the current term for workplace adjustments or workplace modification. Under the Disability Discrimination Act (1992), employers are obligated to make adjustments or personalisations to accommodate an individual’s disability, unless that adjustment or personalisation would result in unjustifiable hardship for the employer.

Relevant legislation

Northern Territory Public Sector Employment and Management Act and Regulations (PSEMA) 2012\(^10\)

The PSEMA ensures that all employees have equal employment opportunities [refer Section 28(2)(f)]. This commitment is expanded further in Employment Instruction 10 – Equality of Employment Opportunity Programs (EEOP), which provides the minimum requirements for developing EEOPs.

Under the amended PSEMA, a Chief Executive can implement special measures [refer 38B] (e.g. program, plan or arrangement) with the approval of the Commissioner for Public Employment (CPE) provided they comply with the Anti-Discrimination Act. Special measures allow an agency to implement programs, plans or arrangements which could be used to specifically employ people with disabilities.

Northern Territory Anti-Discrimination Act 2015

The _Northern Territory Anti-Discrimination Act_ plays a crucial role in this human rights framework. The Act promotes equality of opportunity for all people in the Territory, and provides remedies for people who have suffered unlawful discrimination on the grounds outlined in the Act. The Act also prohibits direct discrimination, in the area of work, on the basis of disability.

Section 24 deals with workplace personalisations (accommodation of special needs).

Section 57 makes provision for special measures to promote equality of opportunity for groups of people who are disadvantaged or who have special needs.

Disability Discrimination Act 1992

The _Commonwealth Disability Discrimination Act_ makes disability discrimination unlawful and aims to promote equal opportunity and access for people with disability, including in relation to employment.

Disability Services Act 1986

The _Commonwealth Disability Services Act_ aims to provide a co-ordinated approach to assisting people with disability to gain and maintain employment. The Act also provides a set of guiding standards for the delivery of quality services, known as Disability Service Standards.

National Disability Agreement 2012

The National Disability Agreement is an initiative of the Council of Australian Governments (COAG). It provides a strong commitment from the Australian Government, states and territories to provide more opportunities for people with disability to participate and enjoy Australia’s economic and social life.

Key areas of focus

This strategy draws on, and is aligned with the NTPS Human Capital Framework, pinpointing key areas of focus that will ensure the EmployAbility Strategy 2018-2022 is integrated and embedded into broader workforce development initiatives across the sector. The key focus areas are:

Focus area Describer Human capital response

- We have a positive and high performance culture.
- We have high performing teams.
- We strive to achieve continuous improvement and operational efficiencies in everything we do.

Workplace Conditions
