ABOUT THE SPEAKER:

Sujay Kentlyn

Sujay is a sociologist who has spent more than ten years in research and writing, and developing and delivering education and training for government and community services, community organisations and the general public, university students and academics. Their work has focussed on diversity and inclusion; human rights, discrimination and equal opportunity; social determinants of health; and understanding disadvantage, marginalisation and social participation. This has largely been in relation to LGBTIQ+ health and ageing, in policy and service delivery, with a special interest in gender identity. Sujay identifies as non-binary and uses the pronouns they/them/their.
